Parental Permission: Dani Grant School of Dance will seek permission from parents/guardians before an online streaming class which includes a two-way video of the pupils and the teacher. Parents/Guardians or an approved adult need to be present during the online streaming class as well as the pre-recorded sessions. Parents need to sign/give permission for live streaming (both teacher and students streaming).

Risk Assessment needs to be taken place by the parents following guidelines by the teachers, eg. If there are furniture that could be a potential hazard, no dancing in the kitchen, slippery floor children can wear trainers instead of their ballet shoes. Parents take responsibility for accessing the location in which the students will be performing as well as committing to supervise younger children and provide assistance when needed.

Health and Safety: The teacher will be providing feedback as well as guide the parents in order to help their child perform the content accurately and without harming themselves. For older children where they are able to follow instructions and have a better understanding of the teacher's feedback, parents or a qualified adult, needs to commit to be present in the room in order for child protection regulations to be met.
